

makerjawn_kindnesscards educating, sharing, + caring w/ simple circuitry

materials:

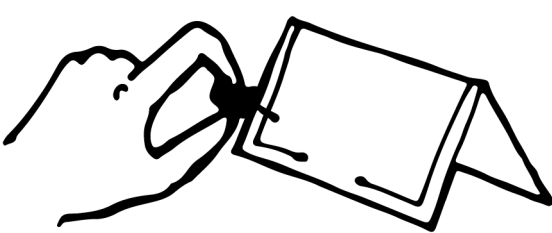

- led
- coin-cell battery
- card
- pushpin
- markers
- tape
- googly eyes

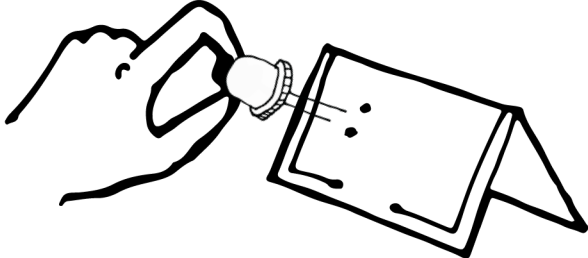

how-to:

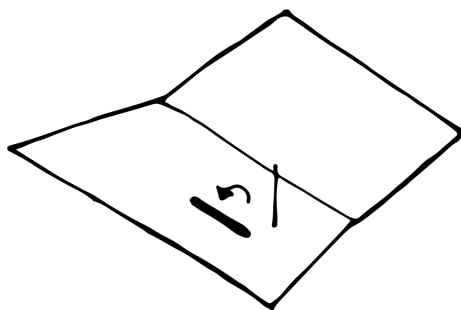

decorate your card

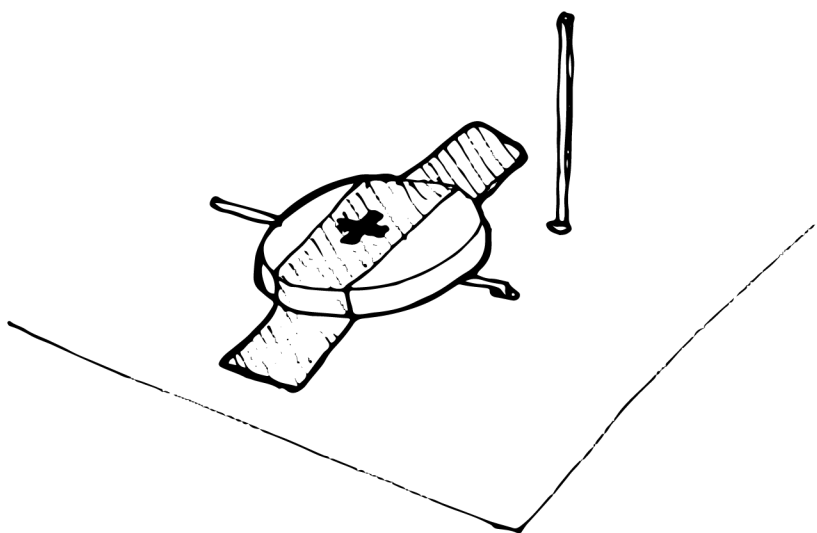

poke two holes for the LED

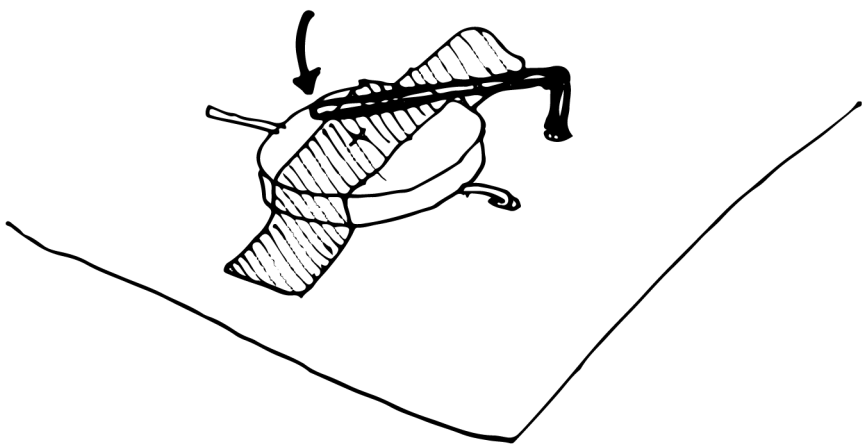

insert the LED

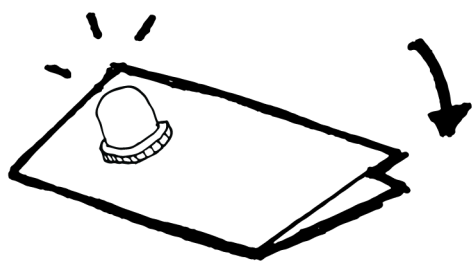

fold down the short leg

tape down the battery (+) side up

fold the positive leg over fold the card over!

things to consider:

building a safe framework for implementing:

physiological self

individual: the root of it all, an explorer, in this situation anyone willing to try something new and willing to share.

saftey

resources: housed within the library we begin to have a healthy environment to come together and use the tools of knowledge generation and gathering.

love + belonging

people: the local community, library goers, library workers, and mentors are able to come together. Creating a network and and place

esteem

sharing: of knowledge in the space as a group allows for generation of raport in all parties associated.

self actualization

making+ where the creative mind of the individual is propelled on to create and share via the vehicle of the kindness card. imbedded in this moment is knowledge, gift-giving, and unrestricted thinking and making.

in gauging interest:

hanging out:

the person may not actively be engaged in the activity, and just there to be part of a group.

messing around:

at this point an individual is actively engaged in making and doing the project to completion. they're along for the ride.

geeking out:

individuals may after making or customizing their own card may find alternate end uses for it, these folks are actively engaged and thinking past the how-to.